

Doing interesting research: challenging assumptions and creating mysteries

Mats Alvesson
University of Lund, Sweden

Research is often characterized by the reproduction of taken for granted assumptions and thereby predictable and boring. Incremental studies dominate. Interesting studies are based on the articulation and challenging of dominant assumptions and the development of new ideas based on alternative assumptions. The talk presents methodological ideas for how this can be accomplished.