

Professor Günter K. Stahl

Günter K. Stahl is Professor of International Management at the Wirtschaftsuniversität Wien (WU Vienna); and Associate Professor of Organizational Behavior at INSEAD. A psychologist by training, his research interests include the dynamics of trust within and between organizations; the cross-border transfer of knowledge; global mobility and international careers; socio-cultural processes in teams, alliances, mergers and acquisitions; and how to manage people and culture effectively in those contexts. His research has been published in leading academic journals and profiled in a wide range of media including the Wall Street Journal and Financial Times.

Günter serves on the advisory boards of several for-profit- and non-profit organizations, including Catalyst, the leading research and advisory organization working globally with companies to build inclusive environments and expand opportunities for women in business. He also has extensive consulting experience and been involved in executive teaching for a variety of industrial and professional services companies in Europe, North America, and Asia.